When I run it inside Eclipse (Indigo), everything works fine, but when I deploy to Tomcat as a war file and the I try to go to my application via a browser, it hangs. When I run the application in Tomcat as a war file, I don't get any errors. When I try to access the webapp via browser, this is the error message I get: HTTP Status 500 - Servlet.init() for servlet spring threw exception type Exception report message Servlet.init() for servlet spring threw exception description The server encountered an internal error that prevented it from fulfilling this request. exception java.lang.IllegalArgumentException: Unable to initialize MappingMappingManager root cause java.lang.IllegalArgumentException: No @Bean method found for de.myorg.controller.LoginController.login() root cause java.lang.NoSuchMethodException: de.myorg.controller.LoginController.login() root cause java.lang.NoSuchMethodException: de.myorg.controller.LoginController.login() root cause java.lang.NoSuchMethodException: de.myorg.controller.LoginController.login() root cause java.lang.NoSuchMethodException: de.myorg.controller.LoginController.login() root cause java.lang.IllegalArgumentException: No @Bean method found for de.myorg.controller.LoginController.login() I tried to create a new WAR-file, and when I run the application inside Eclipse everything works fine, but when I deploy it to Tomcat, the same error as above occurs. I tried the same with another Java project, and it worked fine. I don't think that there are any typos inside the LoginController. @Controller @RequestMapping("/login") public class LoginController { @Autowired private LoginService loginService; public LoginController() {
