FOREST AND FIELDS Plant species of greater importance to birds, such as white-tailed prairie chickens and yellow-bellied marmots, and wider range of annual and perennial plant species, such as species found on prairie dog mounds and prairie meadows and plains and orchards, and seasonal wetlands. Wildlife managers may identify specific habitat management activities that will improve the health of the species that use the site. Areas could be targeted for nest boxes, cover with shrubs or trees, erecting new fences, or the planting of attractive and native plants.
